As Sandi Gorman watched Hurricane Katrina decimate the Gulf Coast, she knew she just couldn't sit there.

"My husband and I said, 'This isn't right, we need to do something.' "

Gorman gathered a host of volunteers to sponsor several Gulf Coast families relocated to our region. But then she began to recognize the need closer to home.:

"We decided that we ought to put this group of community members to work by letting them help out within their own community."

Gorman founded T&E Care (Tredyffrin and Easttown Care), which helps dozens of families make it from day to day — from paying rent to furnishing a home to covering college costs.

"I don't know, the combination of having the right people in the right place has just made it not that hard to do."
